

ABSTRACT

Vesicles formed from synthetic polymers are used for encapsulation of compounds in order to protect the compounds from the chemical environment in which they are used.